Playoff pucks mean bucks for Boston-area businesses

Money matters. Experts say that playoff games bring lots of loot to the Hub.

The big Bruins win Saturday did a lot to fuel the city's hockey fever, but whether our sports teams win or lose, playoff games of any kind mean big bucks for Boston.

"Major postseason sports events such as the Stanley Cup Final are great for boosting both the city's competitive spirit as well as our economy," said Charles Rudnick, vice president of communications for the Greater Boston Chamber of Commerce.

He estimates that the city rakes in roughly $5 million per Bruins playoff home game, not counting ticket sales, with wealth trickling across the board. Hotels, transportation, restaurants, retailers and of course bars all get a taste of the financial feast.

"It's spending that gets spread out over a number of businesses. It really is good news for our economy," said Pat Moscaritello, president and CEO of the Greater Boston Convention and Visitors Bureau. "We're very passionate about our sports teams, but we tend to only think of it as a big business for the players, owners and agents ... it's also big business for the city's visitor economy."

According to Moscaritello, about 30 percent of the 17,500 TD Garden spectators come from outside the Boston area.

The playoffs are especially good news for local businesses that took a hit during the NHL lockout. A regular-season Bruins game brings in about $1 million, and with 34 games cancelled, businesses missed out on a ton of cash.

"Here we are into the middle of June, and we're still playing hockey. This is not something that you'd normally see, and that's good. When businesses are building their budgets for the year, they usually don't factor in revenue from NHL games this late in the season," Moscaritello said. "The Stanley Cup trophy is silver, but for our visitor economy, just to be in the finals is gold."

Money makers

Each Bruins playoff game generates about $5 million in revenue for the city, not including ticket sales. A regular-season Bruins game rakes in roughly $1 million in revenue for Boston.

- About 30 percent of the roughly 17,500 fans watching the game at the TD Garden come from outside the region.
- It's good, green news for local businesses, which did not count on additional Bruins-related business at this point in the year. Experts also say playoff games make up for revenue lost during the hockey lockout.

Whitey trial. Confessed hit man Martorano likely to testify today in court

One of the government's key witnesses in the case against alleged mob boss James "Whitey" Bulger is expected to take the stand this week, possibly as early as today, and testify against his former gang pal.

John Martorano, a hit man who served a dozen years in jail after he confessed to racketeering and 20 murders, may testify once lawyers finish with the testimony of a former bookie that was allegedly connected to Bulger's Winter Hill Gang. MICHAEL NAUGHTON

Police search for Mission Hill stabbing suspect

Women stabbed. A man in his 20s is the main suspect in two violent attacks.

Boston Police are looking for a man who allegedly stabbed two women as they walked through Mission Hill around 2 a.m. on Saturday.

The suspect, who is described as white and in his early 20s, allegedly jumped out of the bushes and grabbed the first victim as she walked along Vancouver Street.

Police said he attempted to sexually assault her, then stabbed her in the leg as she fled.

The second attack happened less than an hour later on Huntington Avenue, police said, and was nearly identical to the first attack, except the victim sustained a stab wound to her hand.

Both women's injuries were considered non-life threatening, police said.

Following the attacks, police issued warnings to women walking alone in the Mission Hill area.

They included walking only in well-lit areas, remaining alert, wearing shoes that allow for added mobility and keeping a whistle within reach.

Hundreds of thousands attend rally for Erdogan

Speech. Erdogan said the rallies were to kick off campaigning for elections next year and not related to the protests.

People gather during a rally at the Kazlicesma parade ground in Istanbul yesterday to listen to a speech by Turkish Prime Minister Tayyip Erdogan. / GETTY IMAGES

Turkish Prime Minister Tayyip Erdogan rallied hundreds of thousands of supporters at an Istanbul parade ground yesterday as riot police fired teargas several yards away in the city center to disperse anti-government protesters.

Erdogan told a sea of flag-waving supporters that two weeks of protests had been manipulated by "terrorists" and dismissed suggestions that he was behaving like a dictator, a constant refrain from those who have taken to the streets.

Quoted

"They say, 'You are too tough,' they say, 'dictator.' What kind of a dictator is this who met the Gezi Park occupiers and honest environmentalists. Is there such dictator?" Erdogan said to roars of approval from the crowd

Riot police fired teargas into side streets around the central Taksim Square as he spoke, trying to prevent protesters from regrouping after hundreds were evicted from the adjoining Gezi Park, the center of the protests, late on Saturday.

"The attitude across Turkey with the pretext of Taksim's Gezi Park is not sincere. It is nothing more than the minority's attempt to dominate the majority. ... We could not have allowed this and we will not allow it," he said.

Bulldozers removed barricades and municipal workers swept the streets around Taksim that were sealed off by police yesterday after thousands took to the streets overnight following the raid by riot police firing teargas and water cannon.

The umbrella protest group behind the Gezi Park campaign, Taksim Solidarity, called for demonstrators to gather peacefully again in the square, but Istanbul Gov. Huseyin Avni Mutlu made clear they would not be allowed to do so. REUTERS

White House chief: Location of leaker currently unknown

Step up. Senator Chambliss says Snowden ought to "look an American jury in the eye" and explain why.

White House Chief of Staff Denis McDonough said yesterday that he doesn't know the whereabouts of Edward Snowden. The last known location of the admitted U.S. intelligence leaker was in Hong Kong.

McDonough, in an interview on CBS' "Face the Nation," declined to say whether there are plans to prosecute Snowden, a former government contractor.

Speaking on Fox News Sunday, former Vice President Dick Cheney defended the NSA programs, which began under former President George W. Bush, saying they have produced valuable intelligence in the global war on terrorism and have led to the disruption of planned attacks on the United States.

Cheney said he was unaware of what, if anything, President Barack Obama did to alter the surveillance techniques.

"The program, obviously, from what's now been released, is still in operation," Cheney, 72, said. "I think it's good. I think it has saved lives and kept us free from other attacks." BLOOMBERG

US spy agency paper says fewer than 300 phone numbers scrutinized

Who's listening? / GETTY IMAGES

The government only searched for detailed information on calls involving fewer than 300 specific phone numbers among the millions of raw phone records collected by the National Security Agency in 2012, according to a government paper obtained by Reuters on Saturday.

The unclassified paper was circulated Saturday within the government by U.S. intelligence agencies and apparently is an attempt by spy agencies and the Obama administration to rebut accusations it overreached in investigating potential militant plots.

The paper circulated on Saturday said data from the NSA phone and email collections programs not only led U.S. investigators to the ringleader of a plot to attack New York's subway system in 2009, but also to one of his co-conspirators in the United States.

The paper discusses an NSA program that collects "metadata" — raw information that does not identify individual telephone subscribers — from major U.S. phone companies showing all calls made by those companies' subscribers to phones within the United States and overseas. REUTERS

Countries

The paper repeats assertions by administration spokesmen that NSA email and telephone data-collection programs contributed to the disruption of "dozens of potential terrorist plots here in the homeland and in more than 20 countries around the world."

Twitter feed

We check in with some of Hollywood's biggest names to see what they've been up to — in their own words, in 140 characters or fewer.

Today, Kevin Hart and Pauly D are happy for Kim and Ye:

@KevinHart4real: Congrats to @KimKardashian & @KanyeWest on the birth of their new baby girl!!!

@DJPaulyD: Congrats @KimKardashian And @kanyewest On The Birth Of Your Baby Girl !!!!!

Kim finally gives birth to Kanye's wunderkind

OMG, you guys. It finally happened. On Saturday, Kim Kardashian and Kanye West's superspawn entered the world, thus setting the bar for every future baby to be born, ever. In fact, we might as well just close the book on having babies right now, because this was some next-level baby-making.

It's a girl (as was revealed in "Keeping Up with the Kardashians," which you'd know if you watched that show. Which we definitely do not). Both Kim and baby are reportedly healthy and doing just fine.

As of press time, they had yet to reveal her name, but we'd be surprised if it didn't start with a "K." Over/under odds on some variation of the word king? We'd also be surprised if it wasn't something totally wack. We find it very hard to imagine these two naming their firstborn daughter something reasonable and not designed to elicit WTFs from everyone not crazy, everywhere.

Plus, the Kim K./Yeezy progeny has got a lot to live up to, namewise, considering that baby will probably spend most of its young life trying to crawl out of Blue Ivy's shadow. (We are still not over the fact Jay and B named a child Blue Ivy, by the way. It's a human being, not a supervillain from "X-Men," for Pete's sake.)

We're not sure if we're more excited to find out what they've named this celebaby (has anyone coined that yet? If not — dibs) or to find out how much money these two collect for the first baby photos. On a side note, what are we all supposed to speculate about on Twitter now that both Ye's album and Ye's baby have leaked? Ew, sorry.

And because all other pop culture news pales in comparison to the birth of Yeezy Jr., here's the rest of your celeb gossip, in brief:

Jackson hates Bieber

Paris Jackson has reportedly revealed that she hates Justin Bieber. A sentiment to which we can only reply, "Join the club."

Garlin can't curb his road rage

Well, parking lot rage. Jeff Garlin of "Curb Your Enthusiasm" went to jail over the weekend in L.A. for smashing the car window of a couple who stole his parking spot. If this was an episode of "Curb," this would be hilarious. In real life, however, that's just messed up.

Putin jacked Patriots' Super Bowl ring, maybe

The Russian prez is denying allegations that he stole Patriots owner Robert Kraft's ring, claiming it was a gift. Are we the only ones who think everything about this is funny?

Q&A

'Bachelor' Sean knows his 15 minutes are ticking

We caught up with "The Bachelor" and "Dancing with the Stars" contestant Sean Lowe at the one-year anniversary party for Haven Rooftop at the Sanctuary Hotel on Tuesday. The former college football player dropped some wisdom on becoming caught up in the reality star spotlight.

"Once the show is done filming and you get out, you're hit with some sense of fame," Lowe said. "I can see how it's appealing, but it always fades away eventually."

Of bride-to-be Catherine Guidici, he told us:

"I went into 'The Bachelor' thinking, 'If I could find someone to settle down with, then I'm ready,'" Lowe said. "Catherine was that person, and I couldn't be happier."

Lowe says he's enjoying the limelight for now, but plans on returning to Dallas to work on his insurance business. As for returning to normalcy, he says his wedding will be televised, guaranteeing his "fame" will last at least until after the cake is cut.

Oh captain, my captain

S.O.S. One-man play "Jimmy Titanic" might be the only comedy ever written about the ill-fated Titanic.

"Humorous" might be the last thing most people would call the story of the ill-fated Titanic, but that's the word actor Colin Hamell uses to describe the New Repertory Theatre's "Jimmy Titanic."

"This is the Titanic as you've never seen it before," says Hamell.

An Irish shipbuilder named Jimmy Boylan is the central character, but Hamell takes on 20 roles that include immigrants, a politician, a New York Times editor, first-class passengers, angels and God.

"The heaven scenes really add the humor," he says. "Archangel Gabriel is very effeminate and God is played as an inner-city, chain-smoking Dublin gangster type."

The scenes between these two are Hamell's favorites to perform.

"The demise of the Titanic is such a tragic story. These scenes lift the audience back up again," he explains.

There are no costume changes, or sets, in the show, so Hamell must carefully differentiate between each character.

"The key is very clear body language: the way you stand, the way you hold your hand for each character," he says. "You get to recognize each one as the play unfolds."

Changing accents, too, is crucial. Hamell, who grew up outside of Dublin, has had to master quite a few accents: Northern Irish, French, Spanish, English and American.

Those affected

"Jimmy Titanic" explores the event from all sides, and perhaps from some you might not have not considered. "A lot of people don't realize the ship was built in Belfast," says Hamell. "[A character] is very upset that their shipbuilding industry will suffer because the Titanic went down."

HOW TO DEAL WITH THE GREEN-EYED MONSTER

Everybody gets jealous from time to time. Focusing inward, not outward, can help alleviate some of those feelings. / WWW.JUPITERIMAGES.COM

A former dance teacher of mine used to say, "Don't bother comparing yourself to others. There will always be people better than you, and worse than you. The most important thing is to ask yourself, 'Am I improving?'"

Of course, this is often easier said than done. Not only are we constantly bombarded by advertisements preying on our insecurities, but recent studies show that social media sites actually feed jealousy by creating the illusion that other people are living happier, more fulfilled lives than our own. I say "illusion" because, as a Stanford University study seems to suggest, people often underestimate the discontent of others.

Most of us can expect to encounter the ugly green monster from time to time. And while we may never truly slay the beast, the following tips can help keep it at bay:

The question:

Recently, a lot of my friends are getting engaged, having babies and going on cool trips. Although I'm happy for them, I'm also envious. How do I deal with my jealousy?

1 Acknowledge your jealousy without judgment. Envy is a universal human emotion. The more you can own your feelings, the less likely you'll act on them.

2 Get in touch with the aspiration and wishes underneath the envy. Are you jealous of your friend's trip to Tuscany? Ask yourself what steps you might take to make your own travel plans. It may take time, but setting an intention can point you in a positive direction.

3 Remember that each person has his or her own unique recipe for happiness. Some people prefer roller coasters; others would rather curl up with a book. Being attuned to your own life purpose, needs and accomplishments helps negate the need for comparisons.

4 Instead of comparing yourself to others, compare yourself to the person you were one, five or 10 years ago. Are you wiser, happier, more confident? If so, take pride in your growth. If not, explore what has thrown you off course, or how you can improve your outlook.

A lot goes into the perfect pour. / COMSTOCK

Working it: John Stemler, brewer

On tap. Boozehounds, take note: It's hard to take a day off when you're brewing the perfect pour.

Stemler often works as many as 80 hours a week. / PROVIDED

You would think that life as a brewer would be a constant buzz. Think of all the beer tasting you would have to do to get the product just right! We spoke with John Stemler, Brewmaster at Free Will Brewing Company in Perkasie, Pa., to find out just how much goes into crafting the perfect pour.

How long have you been at this job?
Since we got our final licensing in January of 2012.

When you get to work, what's the first thing you do?
It depends on the day. On a brew day, I get the Hot Liquor Tank going, then grind grains for the first brew. If it's a bottling day, I get packaging ready for the style being bottled. Most of the other days I clean things, transfer beer from one tank to another, then clean something else.

Who do you work with, and what is your relationship with them?
I work with David Wood, the assistant brewer. He is great at picking up my way of doing things and does some of the tedious jobs so I can work on other things. He works well at a brewery because he can tolerate the long hours. We get along because we enjoy some of the same tastes in beer design and flavor. We often joke about ridiculous names for beers.

I also work with Dominic Capece, the business and operations manager and equipment whisperer. We don't often brew together anymore, but when we did, it was usually seamless silence since we had brewed together from the beginning. Now, we try and keep him away from brewing so he can man the bottling line and tend to the business. We work well in this business because our talents interlock, and we share both similar and complementary desires for beer flavors and styles.

How does your job make you feel?
Usually exhausted, because we average about 80 hours a week. But we are excited to make this company grow,

Q&A: Community

How do you feel your job changes or affects the larger community?

There is an overwhelming sense of town pride. I have lived my entire life in the town where we are located. We have raised money and donated products to several town organizations. Every little bit helps.

Horoscope

♊ Gemini | May 22-June 20.
Be prepared to take on a leadership role in a group endeavor. Once you provide the necessary wherewithal to accomplish a goal, everyone will follow.

♋ Cancer | June 21-July 22.
Don't be too quick to jump to conclusions, because quick assessments are apt to be faulty. If you take time to check out the facts, you'll be on much firmer ground.

♌ Leo | July 23-Aug. 22.
Do not expect more from friends and family than they have the right to expect from you. And if you think you'll soon be in need of some help, maybe you should offer some yourself.

♍ Virgo | Aug. 23-Sept. 22.
Intangibles are likely to confuse you, because you might not be able to grasp what they're all about. Stick to what you can touch, and you'll fare better.

♎ Libra | Sept. 23-Oct. 22.
Although you're usually a pragmatic person, today you could be more of a daydreamer. To be on the safe side, rely more on logic than on imagination.

♏ Scorpio | Oct. 23-Nov. 21.
Business conditions can be a bit tricky, but as long as you conduct your affairs in a methodical manner, you should still come out on the profit side of the ledger.

♐ Sagittarius | Nov. 22-Dec. 21.
Someone you're not especially fond of might lead you toward something quite beneficial. Don't allow emotion to interfere with opportunity.

♑ Capricorn | Dec. 22-Jan 20.
Your future success could be predicated upon how much you ante up. When the stakes are high enough, your drive and motivation will give you the confidence you need.

♒ Aquarius | Jan. 21-Feb 18.
Try not to unfairly judge someone you meet for the first time. If given half a chance, this person could be an asset as a friend and as a valuable contact.

♓ Pisces | Feb. 19-March 20.
Be careful, because ego could exert a strong influence on your decision-making processes, which could lead to poor judgment on your part.

♈ Aries | March 21-April 20.
Your concerns regarding a person vital to your current plans will be put to rest. This person's behavior will clearly demonstrate his or her steadfast support.

♉ Taurus | April 21-May 21.
To achieve something important, you need to rely only on yourself and nobody else. You'll have greater success without helpers who don't fully understand what you're doing.

Kanye West is not a good person

Re: 'Kanye's universe' (Metro, June 14-16) PLEASE STOP with the articles on Kanye West! Every time I see him, I throw up in my mouth a little. He's such a dreadful human being. I'm begging you. PAUL A. BIBO, VIA EMAIL

I guess the good news is that Kanye West was at Kim Kardashian's side when she gave birth to their baby girl this weekend. The bad news is that he reportedly grabbed the baby and announced to all present that the award should have gone to Beyonce for producing one of the greatest babies of all time.

And he infects the written word

Re: 'Kanye West does not want to hear the sound of your dumb voice' (Metro, June 12) Nowhere in my Bible does it show that Jesus' middle name was "effing." I know there is such a thing as freedom of speech, however that was downright disrespectful.
MELISSA D. CASEY, VIA EMAIL

Re: 'Show a little effing respect' (Metro, June 14-16) A letter writer claimed that if the writer had used the Jewish God's name in vain or the Muslim's deity in vain, members of those groups would riot. Jews would not riot in such a situation and neither would Christians. While I agree that such religious deities' names should not be used in jest, she should relax a bit. RON FALCON, VIA EMAIL

2013 STANLEY CUP FINAL – BOSTON vs. CHICAGO

A B's Garden party on tap?

NHL playoffs. Boston is looking to take a 2-1 lead in the Stanley Cup Final against the Blackhawks.

In the NHL playoffs, home ice isn't nearly as important compared to the inherent advantage in the MLB, NFL and NBA playoffs.

With that said, Saturday night's 2-1 overtime win by the Bruins over the Blackhawks in Game 2 of the Stanley Cup Final is a huge result for many reasons. Boston, home tonight for Game 3 (8 o'clock, NBCSN), is 7-2 at TD Garden this postseason so being in Boston tied at 1 provides a great opportunity to really take control of the series or at least go back to Chicago tied 2-2. Plus the Blackhawks are only 3-4 on the road this postseason and it's clear that they haven't been the same team outside of United Center.

At this point, Bruins fans should be hoping for overtime. The Bruins have become a solid team in the sudden death moments of playoff hockey. The Game 2 win improved the Bruins' overtime record in these playoffs to 5-2. In the process, they set a franchise record for most overtime victories in a single postseason.

What's most impressive is that they've recorded at least one in each series: two OT wins vs. the Maple Leafs, one OT win vs. the Rangers, one OT win vs. the Penguins and now one OT win vs. the Blackhawks. Boston has experienced the highest of highs — Game 7 vs. Toronto, Game 3 vs. Pittsburgh (two OTs) and Game 2 vs. Chicago — and lowest of lows — Game 4 vs. New York and Game 1 vs. Chicago (three OTs). Factoring in the extra sessions, the Bruins and Blackhawks have basically played 10 periods and both teams have scored five goals apiece. One of the better stats so far this series: The winning squad never led until they ended it in overtime.

Stanley Cup Final

Bruins goaltender Tuukka Rask has been brilliant this postseason as he owns a .944 save percentage with a 13-5 record and a 1.73 goals against average. Blackhawks netminder Corey Crawford has been near his equal with a .935 save percentage.

THE TOP BARS TO TAKE IN THE BRUINS WITHIN WALKING DISTANCE OF THE GARDEN

Opinion

MATT BURKE
MATTHEW.BURKE@METRO.US

One of the many great things about being a Bruins, Red Sox or Celtics fan is that there are countless bars just a few steps away from their home venues. Not every sporting fan base has this luxury. Hub sports fans can still get that great "all for one, one for all" atmosphere without paying $8.50 for a watered down Bud Light. Bruins fans, in particular, like their beer and they like it cheap.

Vito's Sports Bar
54 Salem St.
If you want to venture away from the Canal Street bleep-show and get a decent distance away from the North Station T stop crowd, Vito's in the North End might do the trick. There are three large flatscreens in the front with three smaller screens behind the bar. The painting of boxer Rocky Marciano lets you know it's a true Boston sports bar and the framed autographed photo of 1990s WWE female wrestler Sable on the women's bathroom door lets you know you're in Bruins territory.

The Grand Canal
57 Canal St.
The outside patio is fun if its 75 degrees and sunny (which occurs here two or three times per year) with a scenic view of Route 93. Has plenty of TVs, which is a huge plus.

Boston Beer Works
112 Canal St.
Not the ideal place to watch a game. If you want a giant slice of watermelon in your beer, you probably aren't much of a B's fan anyway.

Porter's Bar & Grill
173 Portland St.
The best thing about Porter's is that it tends to hide and therefore you might actually be able to get a seat in front of a TV during a Bruins Stanley Cup game (unthinkable, right?). It has 12 beers on tap, one decent-sized projection screen and two small flatscreens behind the bar.

The Littlest Bar
102 Broad St.
It's a little bit of a hike from the Garden, but B's fans are a gritty bunch. It is what it claims to be – little – and has just a couple of TVs. Still, this place has the potential to get rowdy.

The Red Hat
9 Bowdoin St.
A bit of a jump from the Garden as well. Might want to rickshaw this one. But down those steep stairs is a solid B's atmosphere.

Stanza dei Sigari
292 Hanover St.
Want to smell like Bobby Orr and Phil Esposito did in 1972 after a night out on the town? Stanza dei Sigari is your best bet – because you can smoke cigars and rip butts INSIDE.

Hurricane O'Reilly's
150 Canal St.
As soon as the last goal is scored it has the potential to turn into an episode of Wicked Single – aka a messy grind-fest on the dance floor with a bunch of guys in Lucic jerseys looking to slide the puck by the goalie. This place will be next to impossible to get into on a game night this week as it is a bandwagon fan's dream.

The Sports Grille
132 Canal St.
It's a sports bar with lots of TVs, food and beer. Inside you will find tributes to Kareem Abdul-Jabbar and Wayne Gretzky. Guessing the owners are either from L.A. or Generic-ville, USA.

The Four's
166 Canal St.
It was once voted the No. 1 sports bar in America by Sports Illustrated and you can eat a sandwich named after Ray Bourque. Another spot that will be next to impossible to get into, but if you show up at 3 p.m. or so, you'll likely be set for a fun night and a $732 tab.

Sullivan's Tap
168 Canal St.
The quintessential Bruins bar where the PBRs and Bud heavy's flow like Coors Light, err, water. It's cash only, so be prepared to slip the fire marshal a couple Abraham Lincolns.

Big, bad Baltimore

Orioles stamp out Sox again

The Red Sox still can't solve AL East rival Baltimore as the O's took three of four from Boston this past weekend. Chris Davis got to Sox starter Jon Lester in the third inning yesterday, blasting a two-run homer, as Boston fell in the series finale, 6-3. Lester worked five innings and gave up five earned runs on nine hits. The Orioles are now just a game and a half behind the Sox for first in the AL East. The Yankees are three and a half games out.

Celtics. Trade winds are blowing harder than ever regarding Doc, KG, Clips

The Celtics appear set to trade their highly respected coach in exchange for a package centered around Los Angeles Clippers center DeAndre Jordan. Jordan averaged 8.8 points per game and 7.2 rebounds per game last season for L.A., but is believed to have All Star-caliber potential. Jordan was a 2008 second-round draft choice out of Texas A&M and can jump out of the building.

Kevin Garnett is expected to be the other piece of the deal that could accelerate the rebuilding process for Boston. Guard Eric Bledsoe could be the holdup for the Clippers in any potential deal as L.A. wants to have an insurance policy if star point guard Chris Paul leaves the team via free agency on or after July 1.

The Clippers reportedly rejected a deal this weekend in which the Celtics asked for Jordan, Bledsoe and two draft picks in exchange for Rivers and Garnett. The Celtics may hold out in dealing Paul Pierce in a separate deal.

One rebuilding route the Celtics may be interested in exploring is compiling as many draft picks as possible before the June 27 NBA draft in order to move up in the draft, a strategy the Houston Rockets attempted last year.

A few heads turned in May when the Celtics interviewed Kentucky freshman Nerlens Noel, an Everett, Mass., native, at the Chicago combine. Typically, high prospects such as Noel — who is expected to be selected No. 1 or 2 overall — are only interviewed by lottery teams. For the Celtics to move that far up the draft, however, they would likely have to part with point guard Rajon Rondo as well.

Rose grabs U.S. Open title away from Mickelson

Justin Rose captured the 2013 U.S. Open title yesterday at Merion Golf Club, beating out Phil Mickelson and Jason Day.

The Englishman Rose jumped ahead due to a pair of double bogeys by Mickelson. It was the first major won by an Englishman since 1996 when Nick Faldo won the Masters for the final time. It was the first time an Englishman had won the U.S. Open since 1970 when Tony Jacklin won the trophy.

Rose's 70 yesterday gave him a 1-over for the tournament. Day and Mickelson finished 3-over with Jason Dufner, Ernie Els, Billy Horschel and Hunter Mahan all tied for fourth at 5-over. METRO
